Feedpulse feedback

Neshev, Plamen P.H. 6 days ago

- Deliver the app(as much as possible)
- Focus on code, but still keep in mind Design Thinking
- Enter the workshop code and portfolio

Veldhuijzen, Marcel M.C.J. (Teacher) 6 days ago

- Do a daily (or more) commit+pus so that we can follow what you're doing
- Create a planning for the whole semester and explain how you will make up with the time (last 3 weeks) lost.

- Plamen & Ivan agreed to be @ school Mon-Tue-Wed from 9-16.
  - Add workshops code to your git, because repo is still empty. After this commit every day your new code (for the duo -app).
  - Hardware component is currently missing in the duo app concept.
- Negative (insufficient) smiley because no workshop code and too little work on design thinking.

Not present

This is our feedpulse feedback, our main problem was uploading everyday to git, as we didn't do it often enough. I personally felt as I don't have enough to push, and I preferred doing it on not on a daily basis, which I now regret.

For the next project I will try and upload everyday, so the teachers are able to see my progress.

Client Feedback

We talked to a couple of elderly people (mainly in Bulgaria, as the problem there is bigger than here.) From their feedback we were able to further understand the problem.

Presentation

You can find our final presentation in our git repository

Self assessment

Pretty bad. We failed to convert our idea into multiple smart mobile concepts. We failed at creating the app and we also failed taking in feedback from the teachers. Personally I started late and always felt behind and I wasn't able to catch up. So for the android app I will start from the beginning and this time I will not be behind, as I also will be able to attend the workshops.
